

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. I have written my representatives about limiting media ownership and this is an example of what can happen.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves that belong to us free of charge and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line or their managements' partisanship and less of what we need for our democracy.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
